

INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE FOR LEARNING
35TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE

New Frontiers in Learning and Innovation

January 14–17, 2010

Omni Houston Westside
Houston, TX

Research has shown how to teach so students learn. Accelerated Learning is a method and process for instructional design that helps teachers apply the research to classroom practice. With AL, students engage in their own learning in profound ways. Social media, technology, and significant learning experiences support student results on and beyond the test; they prepare them for their future success in the world of tomorrow!

- The Science of Learning, The Art of Teaching
- How to Promote the Desire to Learn
- Hey Dude! Managing Generational Differences in the Classroom
- Edison track and poster presentations—innovation, experimentation, and learning. See what others are doing and learn together!
- Use technology and social networking to support learning
- Write successful objectives and design learning that works!
- New “night flight” sessions to try new AL products and services first-hand

Learn how to become a more effective facilitator of learning:

- Create significant learning using the new technologies to engage students
- Apply music, movement, and the arts to learning
- Develop the skills and mindsets to become the teacher you want to be
- Design and use games and simulations effectively
- Apply proven techniques and leave with many practical tips to enhance learning and engage students

Can't miss a day of class? Sessions tailored specifically for educators are on Saturday and Sunday, including the keynote by internationally acclaimed researcher, author, and educator, Dr. Spencer Kagan. In his interactive keynote, Dr. Kagan will discuss instructional strategies for the new millennium in The Instructional Revolution—Toward a Science of Instruction. Dr. Kagan's keynote promises to provide a revolutionary view of how brains best learn and how best to teach.

We practice what we preach! Sessions at the IAL conference are highly participatory and interactive, and most use the principles of accelerated learning to maximize your learning experience. For 35 years, IAL has presented the only annual conference dedicated to accelerated learning. Come and learn from AL experts.

Flexible registration options enable you to attend one day or the entire conference, with pre-conference workshops about AL in online learning, brain-friendly teaching, and AL presentation techniques.

Register online at www.ialearn.org/conference.php

Early registration discounts available until October 31
